SPORT AND ANECDOTE BY AN OLD FOGEY.

THREATENED DUPTUR. BETWEEN THE A.A. AND THE N C.U. People thoroughly conversant with the inner working of the two bodies who preside over the destinies of amatour sport, the Amateur Athletic Association and the National Cyclists' Union make no secret of the fact that before very long. unless the former of these organisations are willing to modify their ralings a little, a rapture must take place, in which case we shall probably find that the joint agreement come to on the occasion of their last dispute in 1886 will be abandoned, and each will map out a course of their further agreed that all suspensions, collectively agreement seemed perfectly just and bonourable, and for some years the most amicable relations have existed. But whereas the athletic body have simply maintained their ground, and conferred themselves with an almost passive existence, the leaders of the cycling parliament have been slowly and skewly drifting through the shouls of makers' amateurism on to the rocks of professionalism , this plan has been tried, that scheme attempted, and all meaner of restrictions have been enacted without effect, with the consequence that lost season the makers' amulour was practically master of the situation on the puth. To those unacquainted with the phases of modern eyeling perhaps I may explain that a makers' amateur is a rider who, unwilling to join the professional range and compete openly for cash prizes, is prepared to accept pecuniary assistance and an endless supply of the latest pattern cycles in return for the services he renders to the maker in the shape of record or other

Durf ringues. WHERE THE RULING BODIES DIFFER. Ever sings the institution of the Amateur Athletic Association its officials have steadily and firmly refused to legislate for or recognise professionals in any shape or form nor will they knowingly allow any of the fraternity to compete at gatherings under their laws. Their attitude of a dozen years ago is their affitude to-day fiferschally, however, I am inclined to doubt whether the conditions of the racing path and the frequenters thereof are as pare as they were a dezen years ago. Nor do I say this without some little knowledge of the subject.) Wit the National Cyclists' Union it is altogether different. Rightly or wrongly they have permitted the intermixing of amatours and professionals at sports meetings held under their supervision and last year went so for as to admit the projute their ranks and undertook the centrel of the class as a whole. Speaking generally, I consider the professional cyclist has had all the worst of the bargain in being allowed o mix with the other class, for whilst a few unincky individuals have been debarred from competing in amateur events, scores of others equally at fault have been able to pose as amateurs and take the cash which should more properly go to the professed professional. To all fair-minded and honourable sportsmen this must appear a very shabby and underhand method of procedure, but I have no hesitation in saving that these are the individuals who have brought all the trouble into the camp of the Cyclists' Union. Under the N.C.U. rules it is necessary to secure a licence to notions at law by aggrieved individuals, they quiet bour of the day, for service over, a harried dreen Island Coment that while the Union protect themselves from are on perfectly safe ground in debarring from smateur ranks any whom they consider unoutskirts of the city. thought a me exceptionally popular local rider WHAT WILL BE THE RESULT? was being honoured, but when it was repeated Let us for a moment look at the situation as it stands. Supporters of the Amateur Athletic after each individual contest, with the singing Association contaud that all unlicensed riders, of the National Anthem thrown in we began to understand a little of the effesive enthui.e., those riders who have been refused admis sion as amateurs by the N.C.U., are qualified for siam of our Continental friends of which we admission to those clubs affiliated to the athletic had heard so much. It was pretty safe to prebody, insamuch as they have never been professionalised. Those on the Union side plend that there should be some relexation of the severity towards the professional cyclist-for at the prasent time the A.A.A. will permit neither the call dupon to go into details with the racing, unlicensed nor the pro. to compete at meet- especially as I have a little personal experience ings where their rules are in force. We thus find the p ople who profess to speak for the A.A.A. in a very illegical position. They refuse recognition in the first place to all who have not received licences, swait with folded arms for the N.C.U. to announce a termination of the agreement (which we must suppose will be tanta mount to a declaration of war, and then, so it is said by these professedly inspired; will at once solve the mestion and strike a stuggering blow at the supremscy of the Cyclists' Union by opening their arms and their meetings to all who have not professionalised themselves by openly riding for money. A few recriminations might afford entertaining reading, but the time for these has not arrived. As rare John Bright once and, "Force is no remedy," and well-wishers of outdoor pastimes, cycling or athietle, would pref r to see the threatened rupture avoided by conciliatory methods, and the abuses of both the ranning and the bioyole path removed by cornels more in accord with the spirit of the times than by resorting to one of the worst phases of the Irish agilation. In interested circles all manner of apeculations have been indulged in as to the fight; my own opinion is that if the struggle does come the upshot will be the formation of a strong intermediaty class of racing cyclists, who will eventually be compelled—though, the change may be gradual—to join the ranks of the A.A.A. cyclists
